ABSTRACT:

During fiscal year (FY) 2007, the Air Force (AF) maintained full sexual assault prevention and response (SAPR) capability through the strategic placement of full-time civilian and military Sexual Assault Response Coordinators (SARC). Each SARC must complete a mandatory training course before he or she can serve in the respective role. This group of trained members provided services to victims of sexual assault as the 30-month old program continued to become an institutional landmark. The successes of the program relied heavily upon the 1500-plus volunteer Victim Advocates (VA), consisting of AF active duty members and Department of Defense (DoD) civilian employees, to effectively work face-to-face issues with victims after their initial reports. As a key component within the program, first responder training has become more firmly entrenched into functional area formal school sessions; and, field-level training and interaction between these communities have grown into positive working relationships. While the initial stages of the SAPR program focused on awareness and response, the next evolving step is to concentrate on prevention through the development of bystander intervention training. This training will specifically target those in a position to stop sexual assaults before they occur by addressing inappropriate behavior as it occurs. The foundation for this training development began during FY07 with a Symposium consisting of AF leaders, other services, and recognized national subject-matter experts. Continued efforts have narrowed the range of proposed material and focus to that which is suited well for the AF culture and people. As well, the AF has had multiple opportunities to successfully engage with national advocacy groups and public services; and, to serve as keynote emphasis for national level conferences. Throughout FY07, the AF received 565 reports of sexual assaults; 369 were unrestricted reports (includes 36 converted from restricted at the request of the victims) and 232 were restricted reports (36 converted to unrestricted, leaving 196 restricted). While these represent a slight decrease in the reported number of sexual assault reports in relation to previous year reports, the comparative value from previous reports is minimal since the reporting cycle changed from calendar year (CY) to FY; the first three months of the reporting year had to be recalculated from a previous CY reporting cycle and added to new reports for the remaining three quarters. The success of the SAPR program also continues in deployed environments as policies and procedures are refined at specific locations to provide the best available services for victims.

I. PROGRAM OVERVIEW

- a. AF SAPR Program: The AF has 29 full-time active duty military and 71 full-time civilian SARC. Civilian SARC grades are GS-12 and military are usually Captains or Majors. AF SARCs report directly to their installation Vice Wing Commander in order to ensure that they have direct access to senior leadership. Each of the nine AF Major Commands (MAJCOM) also have a SARC, who is responsible for providing guidance for SARCs within his or her command area. The SARCs are supported by 72 civilian and 14 military administrative assistants. There is also one military position assigned to Central Command Air Forces (CENTAF) to provide oversight to AF SARCs at deployed locations in the US Central Command (USCENTCOM) Area of Responsibility (AOR). One full-time civilian and one military member are at the AFPC to provide operational support for the AF SAPR Program. Located in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Manpower, and Services, the civilian Chief and Deputy Chief of the AF SAPR Program develop and implement policy, provide program guidance, and advocate for the AF program with senior leadership and outside organizations and agencies. The AF SAPR Program is fully implemented in the Air Reserve Component, which includes the AF Reserve Command (AFRC) and the Air National Guard (ANG).
- b. AF Deployed Environment: The AF has fully implemented the SAPR Program in the US CENTCOM AOR and in other deployed areas. There are trained full-time SARCs at four AF Air Expeditionary Wing (AEW) locations. In turn, the SARCs also oversee any geographically separated unit that is attached to a main operating location controlled or hosted by the AF. In addition, another main operating location has a military officer (Manpower specialty code) that is also trained as a SARC; the purpose of this dual function is to minimize the number of personnel at this location. Each deployed location has ensured that SARCs are offered adequate work space with sufficient supplies and materials to provide assistance to victims of sexual assault. SARCs in the deployed environment utilize trained VAs to enhance victim response. Each SARC also works with functionally trained investigators, AF Office of Special Investigations (AFOSI), AF Security Forces (AF/SFS), medical, and AF Judge Advocate (AF/JA) personnel at each location to support sexual assault victims. Restricted reporting is an option available in the deployed environment and has been utilized by sexual assault victims. Airlift and ground transportation are available and have also been used to assist victims/get victims proper care in a timely manner.

II. PROGRAM RESPONSE CAPABILITIES

a. Personnel Trained

- i. Annual Periodic Refresher Training: AF SARCs tracked attendance of 514,070 participants during 11,974 annual periodic refresher training sessions during FY07. The training was conducted in a multitude of forums that included gatherings such as unit level training, Commander Calls, and newcomer orientation classes. The training was conducted as routine scheduled sessions, or, at the request of a Commander or other functional area representatives. All Airmen must receive annual refresher training.

- ii. First Responder Training: First Responder training falls into two categories. The first category of training is that which functional communities develop and deliver within formal or informal settings and covers those facets of SAPR for which that particular function has responsibility. This training is described in succeeding paragraphs. The second category of First Responder training is that which is provided by installation level SARCs to specific functional activities to enhance understanding of the relationship and inter-working requirements between the functions; and, to provide skills sets for working with victims of sexual assault. During FY07, AF SARCs conducted refresher training for 1,501 existing VAs and initial training for 1,296 new VAs. Other individuals, not eligible to serve as VAs due to organizational position, such as First Sergeants, were also offered this training to increase understanding of sexual assault and effective response. Further, SARCs conducted first responder refresher training for 475 AFOSI investigators, 7,385 AF/SF members, 5,069 medical personnel, 729 AF/JA members, and 611 Chaplains and staff members.
- iii. Chaplain Training: During 2007, the Chaplain Service provided initial functional-specific training to 160 Chaplains and Chaplain Assistants. Chaplain Assistants are not first responders; however, the Chaplain Service provides this training so the assistants may provide greater support to the clergy while performing their roles. The focus of the training is for Chaplains to comprehend the significance of sexual assault in context of cultural and religious differences that affect individual responses to sexual assault; counseling practices that provide more sensitive approaches to victims; and review of creating worship environments that are sensitive to victims of sexual assault. Specific levels of training include counseling skill-building that understands the relevance of rape myths and how to effectively build rapport with victims; developing an understanding of the violent nature of sexual assault as a crime while preparing families for the psychological and physical symptomology a victim experiences; and the role of confidentiality in counseling victims from multiple cultural, religious, and theological perspectives.
- iv. Investigator Training: The AFOSI conducted initial functional-specific SAPR training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, as part of the USAF Special Investigation Academy (USAFSIA); and, conducted follow-on/recurring subject specific training in local organizational detachments and workshops hosted by the AFOSI and other agencies. For 2007, there were 1,985 investigators assigned to AF units; the unit is called a Detachment and the average number of agents is eight, with a minimum of one in each unit. The AFOSI graduated 211 new agents during 2007 that accomplished the initial functional-specific SAPR training at the training academy.
- v. Medical Personnel Training: During FY07, the AF had 154 emergency room physicians and 479 family physicians trained to complete forensic examinations.

Emergency physicians are fully qualified to perform sexual assault forensic exams (SAFE) without additional training, while family physicians complete basic training during residency to conduct sexual assault forensic examinations in deployed environments; the training is accomplished and managed through the Readiness Skills Verification and is validated when selecting members for deployment. The AF has approximately 38,000 medical members assigned and all received annual training on SAPR.

- vi. AF/SFS Training: All AF/SFS students receive three hours of core lesson material in crime scene, Victim Witness and Protection, and sexual assaults. Law enforcement personnel and investigators receive initial and periodic refresher training on sexual assault response; the training varies between commands and includes topics for sexual assault response policies, crime scene management, interview techniques, coordination with military criminal investigation organizations, and working with VAs and SARCs. More specific sexual assault response training is conducted by the US Army Military Police School that all AF/SFS investigators must attend. During FY 07, AF/SFS trained 3,858 new members and 83 law enforcement investigators.

- vii. The Judge Advocate General's (JAG) Corps Training: Department of Defense Instruction 6495.02 (DoDI) specifies training requirements for JAGs in two areas: (1) training requirements for all JAGs; and (2) additional requirements for trial counsel. In FY07, judge advocates and paralegals received training in a number of different venues. The main training effort was conducted through The Judge Advocate General's School (TJAGS) at Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama. During FY07, TJAGS conducted training as follows on both sets of requirements identified in the DoDI, as specified for each course below:
  - 1. The Judge Advocate Staff Officer Course (JASOC), held three times every fiscal year, is designed to introduce new judge advocates to the career and The Judge Advocate General's Corps. One hundred thirty-four judge advocates received training covering all DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.

  - 2. The Trial and Defense Advocacy Course (TDAC) provides judge advocates with the opportunity to develop their trial advocacy skills through practical demonstrations and moot exercises. Experts are brought from both within and outside the DOD to teach how to overcome the challenges of a sexual assault case, including such topics as addressing the voluntarily-intoxicated victim and crossing-examining an accused. The two week course culminates in a moot court regarding sexual assault. Topics addressed in the Legal Aspects of Sexual Assault Workshop have been integrated into TDAC to better present the training. Seventy-two judge advocates received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.

  - 3. The Advanced Trial Advocacy Course (ATAC) provides experienced trial and defense counsel education in advanced trial techniques to prepare them to try major, complex courts-martial. Twenty-four judge advocates received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.

- 4. The Military Justice Administration Course (MJAC) provides training in the management of the base legal office military justice system to those judge advocates and paralegals who are currently or soon will be either the chief of military justice or the noncommissioned officer in charge of military justice. Sixty-eight judge advocates and paralegals received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.
- 5. The Staff Judge Advocate Course (SJAC) course provides both a refresher course in military law and a study of Air Force leadership principles for judge advocates recently, or about to be, assigned to staff judge advocate positions. Fifty-four new SJAs received training covering tasks for judge advocates and, although their duties do not include serving as trial counsel, this training also addressed DoDI-specified topics related to sexual assault cases.
- 6. The Area Defense Counsel Orientation Course (ADCOC) is taught twice annually, and is designed to introduce new Area Defense Counsel (ADC) to the practical aspects of day-to-day defense counsel duties. The course focuses on advising clients in common defense scenarios, defending clients at courts-martial and working with commanders and the legal office. The inaugural course hosted 33 judge advocates.
- 7. The Law Office Management Course (LOMC) provides base law office Superintendents and noncommissioned officers in charge with information on recent developments having an impact on management of the legal services function of a legal office. Fifty-four senior paralegals received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel to assist them in supporting sexual assault cases.
- 8. The Reserve Forces Judge Advocate Course (RFJAC) provides experienced Reserve and Air National Guard judge advocates with sufficient update information on recent developments in military law to ensure their ability to function effectively, both in their normal reserve duties and in the event of their emergency call to active duty. One hundred twenty judge advocates and paralegals received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.
- 9. The Annual Survey of the Law (ASL) provides experienced Air Reserve Component (ARC) judge advocates and paralegals with the most up-to-date information on recent developments in military law issues. One hundred seventy-eight judge advocates and paralegals received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel. The Judge Advocate Staff Officer Course (JASOC), held three times every fiscal year, is designed to introduce new judge advocates to the career and The Judge Advocate General's Corps.
- 10. In addition to formal training opportunities through TJAGS, training on sexual assault related topics was conducted in a number of additional venues, such as:

a. Circuit workshops were conducted in the Pacific and European Judiciary Circuits in the CONUS and overseas. Over 20 judge advocates and paralegals received training covering topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.

b. This year the Trial Advocacy Conference (TAC) replaced the regional circuit conferences in the CONUS. The TAC provided practicing trial and defense counsel updates on evolving aspects of military trial practice, practical lessons on securing and using evidence and experts and courtroom skills practice with immediate feedback. Students learned from experienced litigators, heard from military judges and senior leaders, and networked with other counsel. Over 100 judge advocates and paralegals received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel.

c. Keystone is the annual worldwide Judge Advocate General's leadership conference with over 700 civilian, active duty, Reserve and Air National Guard judge advocates, attorneys, paralegals and support personnel from The Judge Advocate General's Corps in attendance. They received training covering DoDI-specified topics for judge advocates and trial counsel at the conference.

d. Sexual assault was also a training topic at Major Command, Numbered Air Force and base level functions. At some installations the SARC and or the Staff Judge Advocate sponsored training for first responders, including judge advocates. For example, training seminars that featured Ms Anne Munch, a nationally recognized expert in the investigation and prosecution of sexual assault cases were conducted at Peterson, Buckley, Patrick, and Schriever Air Force Bases in 2007. Attendees included judge advocates from those and surrounding bases, investigators from the Office of Special Investigations and local law enforcement personnel and prosecutors.

b. Availability of Sexual Assault Forensic Examination Kits

i. At the installation level, servicing clinics and hospitals have sexual assault forensic examination (SAFE) kits on-hand when SAFEs are performed at the facility. At most locations victims are referred to local civilian emergency departments where Memoranda of Understanding have been established to provide the examination to victims of sexual assault.

ii. To ensure availability of the SAFE kits, the AFOSI keep a supply of kits on hand at local agent detachments.

iii. There are no known instances of care being hindered due to unavailability of SAFE kits. All victims who chose to have the examination done were provided this service for FY07.

c. Availability of Lab Testing

- i. All laboratory testing is performed by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Laboratory at Fort Gillem, Georgia, or accredited state laboratories. There are no known cases that were hindered by laboratory testing processes or time delays. As well, all prior evidential testing for sexual assault cases was accomplished within the required 60 days, including using identical procedures for cases originating in the deployed environment.
- ii. The AFOSI does not maintain a metric or other measure to track the number of days from when evidence is collected to shipment to the testing laboratory. Instead, procedures for the investigators require that once probative value has been established, and following consultation with internal forensic science consultants, investigators forward the evidence collected to the laboratory. In most cases, this determination is made as soon as the SAFE kit is complete, materials are recovered from the crime scene, and “known” DNA examples are collected from the victim and subject(s); in cases where the subject remains unknown, investigators are instructed not to wait until a suspect has been identified.

d. Offender Tracking

- i. AFOSI: The AFOSI employs the Investigative Information Management System (I2MS), a computer-based system available to AF investigators world-wide to include deployed environments. The I2MS is an activity based system for investigative processes that captures all tasks accomplished by investigators during an investigation; the system documents all agent processes from beginning to end without using less efficient paper forms for manual entry by data operators.
- ii. AF/JA: The AF tracking system for perpetrator prosecution is fully implemented. The Automated Military Justice Analysis and Management System (AMJAMS) is the military justice management information system operated by The Judge Advocate General. AMJAMS provides web-based, real time statistical and management information on the administration of military justice and tracks AF courts-marital and nonjudicial punishment actions. It provides a “cradle to grave” history of all military justice actions and their component processes. AMJAMS is managed by the Military Justice Division, AFLOA/JAJM, located at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, DC, and hosted by the Legal Information Services Directorate, AFLOA/JAS, located at Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, both of which are components of the Air Force Legal Operations Agency (AFLOA).
- iii. AF/SFS: The AF/SFS Management Information System (SFMIS) is used to track all incidents on AF installations. It maintains information on the subjects, victims, witnesses, disposition, and command action on each incident. Information is input manually into SFMIS by the responding patrol member upon completion of his or her investigation. If further information or investigations are needed, the case is forwarded electronically in SFMIS to AF/SF Operations Investigators (SFOI). The report is then provided to the appropriate commander and AF/JA to complete the command action portion of the report. SFMIS is a web based program that can be accessed at all AF installations, including those in the US CENTCOM AOR. The SFMIS database maintains all statistical information to be reported to the Defense Incident-Based Reporting System (DIBRS). The only criminal information that is not entered into SFMIS is case data that has been turned over to the AFOSI.

III. PROGRAM INITIATIVES

- a. Bystander Intervention: Throughout fiscal year 2007, the AF SAPR office focused on bystander intervention as its number one priority and brought numerous national experts together with AF leaders to develop a consistent and effective approach.
  - i. In March 2007, the AF SAPR Program hosted a Sexual Assault Prevention & Risk Reduction Symposium. After devoting more than 300-plus work hours in planning, coordinating, and synchronizing efforts, the AF assembled twenty top national experts on sexual assault prevention and risk reduction to discuss current research, programs and strategies on effective sexual assault prevention and risk reduction, and how to adapt them to a military setting. Participants for the Symposium included AF leadership, representatives from all “first responder” functional communities, MAJCOM SARCs, SAPR Air Staff members, and AF Personnel Center (AFPC) Operations personnel. The AF also extended invitations to representatives from the DoD SAPR Office, other military services, and key agencies and organizations, such as the Office on Violence Against Women, Department of Justice, and the Centers for Disease Control to participate.
  - ii. The AF SAPR office conducted a follow-up three-day meeting to the Symposium in May 2007. The purpose of the meeting was to plan the next steps for developing an AF wide sexual assault prevention and risk reduction strategy. The AF SAPR office met with MAJCOM SARCs to discuss the current status of institutional efforts with prevention and risk reduction efforts, future goals to achieve, and necessary objectives to be met to achieve an effective program. A smaller number of national experts than those used during the Symposium provided subject matter expertise during the planning session. Also, the participants reviewed the experts’ materials from the March 2007 Symposium.
  - iii. In June 2007, the AF SAPR office hosted the second annual SARC training conference. The major theme for this year’s training conference focused on prevention and risk reduction. Unique to this training event, the 150-plus participants spent three days experiencing demonstrations by several national sexual assault experts in specialty areas of prevention and risk reduction programs. A major goal of the training conference was to solicit ideas and recommendations from field-level SARCs as to which elements of the experts’ materials were suitable for inclusion into an AF approach on bystander intervention training. During the training conference, all participants were divided into smaller groups and assigned specific break-out sessions for live demonstrations of the national experts’ prevention and risk reduction programs. Data was collected from the participants that provided a foundation of ideas and perceptions from the field-level SARCs about the demonstrated programs and elements they believe could be utilized for the AF. An outcome goal from the training conference is to create training modules that will provide a necessary skill-set for those who find themselves as bystanders and are in a position to actually stop sexual assault from occurring.

- iv. The AF SAPR office successfully obtained a contract in September 2007 to develop bystander intervention training modules, with separate modules for men, women, and leaders.

b. Collaboration with National Advocacy Groups and Public Services: During 2007, the AF SAPR office made successful efforts to partner and share lessons learned with supporting subject-matter groups and key national agencies.

- i. The AF SAPR Program Manager provided a presentation on the topic “Sexual Assault in the Military: The AF Response” at the National Center for Victims of Crime during June 2007. The conference was held in Washington DC and had more than 750 participants in attendance. The conference’s main subjects were focused on advancing practice, policy and research for sexual assault prevention; and, provided a great opportunity to connect with the national advocacy community and advise them what the AF has accomplished.
- ii. The AF SAPR Program participated in a joint effort with the DoD Sexual Assault Prevention & Response Program Office, the Department of Justice Office for Victims of Crime, the Department of Justice Office on Violence Against Women, the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape, and the National Sexual Violence Resource Center to develop a training curriculum on military SAPR programs for community-based rape crisis centers. Three AF representatives attended an initial planning meeting and continued participating during curriculum development and train-the-trainer pilot program sessions. The goal of the collaborative effort is to help civilian victim advocacy organizations better understand the unique aspects of the military system and military SAPR programs.
- iii. The AF SAPR office hosted a visit by the Associate Director of the U.S. Department of Justice Office on Violence Against Women, and some key staffers during a staff-visit to the Pentagon. The Office on Violence Against Women provides national leadership in developing the nation's capacity to reduce violence against women through the implementation of the Violence Against Women Act. The Associate Director expressed interest in what the AF has accomplished towards sexual assault prevention and in establishing a collaborative working relationship with the military programs.
- iv. A field-level collaborative effort was launched by the SARC at Dover Air Force Base, Delaware. The Dover field office held a multidisciplinary training session on "Investigating and Prosecuting Sexual Assault Cases" that included a national expert with more than 19 years of experience prosecuting sexual assault cases. The assembled multidisciplinary team for the session included participants from the AF SAPR Program Air Staff, AF/JA, AF/SFS, AFOSI, and Military and Civilian Equal Opportunity offices; the session also included participants from Kent General Hospital, the Delaware State Police, and staff from Contact Delaware (a local community rape crisis center). The collaborative actions serve as a benchmark for working with on- and off-base community resources and building partnerships to work on sexual assault issues.

- v. The AF SAPR Program Manager presented the “Sexual Assault in the Military: the AF Response” briefing to the Oklahoma Attorney General's Office Annual Conference with an addendum of issues that pertain specifically to the State. Additionally, an attorney from AFLOA Military Justice Division presented a complementary briefing on “Military Justice 101” comparing the civilian and military justice systems in sexual assault case disposition. The hosting office has an annual Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence conference that is co-sponsored by many key statewide organizations, including the District Attorney's Council, Oklahoma Criminal Justice Resource Center, Oklahoma Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, Secretary of State, US Attorney's Office, Sprit of Health (Native American organization), and the Department of Corrections. The briefing was presented to approximately 600 participants and was part of an interactive workshop with interest in identifying State-based issues when working with military agencies.
  - vi. The AF SAPR Program Manager presented to approximately eighty-five participants during the annual Minnesota Coalition Against Sexual Assault Annual Conference. The presentation served as the keynote approach to energize State advocates about the importance of grassroots, as well as, system-level advocacy for sexual assault victims. Participants included VAs and program staff from statewide rape crisis programs and the focus of the conference was on social change/social justice movements.
- c. Investigator Training: AFOSI has two Advanced General Crimes Courses scheduled to begin in March and October 2008 at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. The Advanced General Crimes Course provides extensive training on a variety of topics, including specific component for sexual assault investigations. This is designed as a two-week course and includes topics for victim sensitivity, post-traumatic stress disorder, and crime scene processing.
- d. Domestic Violence: The AF Family Advocacy Program (FAP) prevention staff, aware of the significant intersection of victims presenting victimization of both domestic violence and sexual assault, continue to work with SARCs in prevention and education specific to sexual abuse in intimate relationships; the AF FAP has requested dedicated funding from the Office of the Secretary of Defense to provide domestic abuse VAs at 36 installations. The domestic abuse VAs will be trained in both sexual abuse and sexual assault subject-matter material.

IV. UNRESTRICTED REPORTING

a. Discussion: The AF received 369 unrestricted reports of sexual assault during FY07. Further comparison between previous year reports and FY07 is not valid due to the transition from calendar year to fiscal year reporting. Under the two reporting time frames, three months of data overlaps and a calendar year report was made for 2006; comparing these results again using a different year-type cut-off will lead to confusion and yield no greater significance. Considering the common data, the total number of sexual assaults reported this year appears to have decreased slightly. The numerical values described below (i. and ii.) only contain results from completed investigations.

i. Victims: There were 294 victims, that included service members and civilians, in the FY07 investigations completed year-to-date. The majority of victims who reported were identified as 279 (95%) women; 15 (5%) victims were men. For all other demographics listed below, there is no differentiation of gender based on DoD reporting requirements. Of the total 289 reports of victims with known ages, the majority (226, 78%) were 24 years of age or under, with 67 (23%) between the ages of 16-19 and 159 (55%) between the ages of 20 to 24. Of the 193 military victims with known pay grades, 166 were in the grades E-1 to E-4 (86%). In interpreting these data, it is important to understand that these are reported assaults. Research demonstrates that most sexual assaults are not reported.

Note: the number of reports for victims does not align with the number of subjects due to unique case circumstances, more than one subject in any given case, or possible multiple victims for multiple subjects.

ii. Subjects: There were 308 subjects, that included service members, civilians, and unidentified subjects, in the FY07 investigations completed year-to-date. The vast majority of subjects (295, 96%) are men. For all other demographics listed below, there is no differentiation of gender based on DoD reporting requirements. Of the 280 subjects with known ages, the large majority were under 24 years of age (187, 67%), with 36 (13%) were between the ages of 18-19 and 151 (54%) between the ages of 20 to 24. Of the 276 military subjects with known pay grades, the majority of 191 (69%) were in grades E-1 to E-4.

iii. Overview of Reports: Most unrestricted reports were 207 (56%) servicemember on servicemember, followed by 119 (32%) servicemember on non-servicemember, 30 (8%) unidentified subjects on servicemember, and 13 (4%) non-servicemember subjects on servicemember. The location of reported sexual assaults appears to be about the same in that 168 (46%) occurred off base, compared to 175 (47%) that occurred on a military installation or 26 (7%) in unidentified locations. Of the 369 unrestricted cases reported, data on length of time between incident and report was unavailable in 11 cases. In the remaining 358 cases, 17 (approximately 5%) were reported more than 12 months after the assault. Data on why the delay in reporting is not available. Forty-seven percent of the cases were reported within 72 hours and 74% within one month.

V. RESTRICTED REPORTING

a. Discussion: The AF received 232 restricted reports of sexual assault during FY07, including 8 from the US CENTCOM AOR. Of the 232 restricted reports, 36 (15.5%) went unrestricted. At the end of FY07, 196 reports remain restricted. Further comparison between previous year reports and FY07 is not valid due to the transition from calendar year to fiscal year reporting. Under the two reporting time frames, three months of data overlaps and a calendar year report was made for 2006; comparing these results again using a different year-type cut-off will lead to confusion and yield no greater significance. SAFEs and/or evidence were collected in 51 of the restricted cases. The evidence is held for one year to allow sexual assault victims additional time to make a decision about whether to report to authorities for a criminal investigation. There were no reported or known instances of an examination kit being unavailable if the victim chose to have one done.

i. Victims: Two hundred twenty-three women and nine men filed reports of sexual assault during FY07. Of the restricted reports received, 162 (70%) were Service member on servicemember, 47 (20%) non-servicemember on servicemember, and 23 (10%) unidentified subject on a servicemember assaults. The grades of victims, from the highest number of reports to the lowest were E1-E4 (157, 68%), E5-E9 (37, 16%), Cadet (19, 8%), O1-O3 (18, 7.5%), and O4-O10 (1, <1%). The majority of the restricted reports indicate they occurred during the hours of 6:00 pm and midnight (126, 54%) and midnight to 6:00 am (75, 32%); the other assaults occurred between the hours of 6:00 am and 6:00 pm, or remain unknown for the actual time. The reported assaults are consistently dispersed throughout all seven days of the week. Services provided to the victims who filed restricted reports totaled 229 referrals for military medical and counseling services and 82 referrals for civilian medical and counseling services. Note: the referral numbers do not align exactly with the total number of victims since some victims requested multiple services and some chose no services. All restricted reports received by victims of sexual assault were in an active duty status at the time of the assault or at the time it was reported.

ii. Overview of Reports: Generally, victims provided restricted reports 27% (62) of the time within 72-hours of the assault; 21% (49) of the time within 72-hours to 1 month after the assault; 12% (28) within 1 to 12 months of the assault, and 14% (32) longer than 12 months after the assault. However, the remaining 26% (61) remain unknown since the victim did not reveal the information during the report; or, the data was not collected since the requirement to start collecting began during the reporting period. The restricted reports received by AF SARCs represented 220 AF, 4 Army, 4 Navy, and 4 Marine victims.

VI. SPECIAL TOPICS

a. Civilian Victims: The AF completed investigations on 101 unrestricted reports from civilian victims of sexual assault; 99 (> 98%) of the reports were reported by female victims and 2 (<2%) from males. However, since civilians are not entitled to restricted reporting, the validity of the data cannot be measured and remains potentially incomplete.

- b. Civilian Subjects: No data was collected on subjects for restricted reports since the requirements were not received until the end of the reporting cycle. For unrestricted reports, the data for completed investigations reveals 6 (<2%) male subjects; however, since the status and gender remain unidentified for 25 (8%) subjects of the completed investigations, the data remains incomplete.
- c. Reports Made Over 12 Months After the Sexual Assault: Since the requirements for this data collection area were not received until after the collection period had started, the data remains incomplete. Of significance though, the data that was collected for three of the four quarters during FY07, victims for 22 (9.5%) of the restricted reports stated that the sexual assaults occurred prior to entry into the AF.
- d. Sexual Assaults Involving Children (less than 16 years of age): The AFOSI received 144 reports of victims under the age of 16 during FY07; however, these remain under investigation and no further data is available or releasable at this time. The AF SAPR program does not work cases involving minors under the age of 16 years old. In instances where installation level SARCs are notified of a report involving a child under the age of 16 years old, they are mandatory reporters per AF policy and must contact the AF FAP with the report.

VII. CHALLENGES WITH UNRESTRICTED AND RESTRICTED REPORTING PROCESSES

- a. Joint Environment: The AF deploys Airmen to locations other than those specified under the US CENTCOM AOR that are world-wide in nature and may support other than wartime environments, such as humanitarian relief efforts. For these locations, if a SARC is not part of the deployment component and the host for the gaining installation is a US force, then the capability is provided by the host. In situations where small AF contingents are not represented by an installation host, then the supporting stateside command component provides SAPR through a reachback capability to an installation that does have a full time SARC.
- b. US CENTCOM AOR: All current SARCs in the US CENTCOM report that there are no challenges with respect to unrestricted and restricted reporting. There are also no known circumstances where victims did not have the opportunity to choose restricted reporting if desired when reporting a sexual assault. As well, there are no special implementing instructions for the SAPR program that differ from the existing AF policies and procedures that are established for all AF installations.
- c. Tracking Victim Services: AF SAPR Coordinators do not track whether victims utilize services offered. However, what is tracked is the type of referral made; and, should victims experience difficulties in obtaining the service, the response coordinator will effectively track until the provided service is able to be obtained, based on the victim's desires. When victims of sexual assault leave the deployed environment, the SARC provides a connection for the victim with a response coordinator at the victim's home station of assignment. Once victims return to their home station, the SARC can continue to offer a full spectrum of services, including referrals to medical and counseling personnel as desired by the victim.

- d. Problem Resolution: By developing effective partnering relationships with other Services' SAPR program managers, many potential problems in the deployed environments have been prevented; and, each Service has the ability to rely heavily on the combined support the Services can offer/provide at any given location.

VIII. CASE SYNOPSES OF COMPLETED INVESTIGATION

- a. Summary of Synopses: A synopsis of the final disposition of subjects' completed sexual assault investigations is included as attachment to the cover memo for this report.
- b. The synopses contained in this Report represent 308 subject dispositions. At the end of FY07, 122 subjects were pending disposition action and 88 cases were still under investigation.

IX. DISCUSSION

a. Lessons Learned: FY07

- i. AFOSI: The AFOSI continues to revise policies related to sexual crime investigations and the necessity to open substantive investigations on all reports of sexual assault.
- ii. Prevalence and Incidence: The AF recognizes the paramount value of prevalence and incidence data to help measure the effectiveness of the SAPR program; and, has taken initial steps to develop measurement methodologies and criteria with contracted resources and partnering with the DoD SAPR Program Office. Measurements for this data will yield significant information to isolate the known frequency per capita of sexual assaults and establish variables for how many reports are actually received in relationship to the number of sexual assaults.
- iii. Public Affairs: The AF SAPR Program office successfully partnered with the Secretary of the AF Public Affairs Office to develop news releases and interviews to positively portray program successes. The synergy to this approach led to balanced and timely articles about the program, especially when a limited number of high-profile cases could potentially cause perceived harm to program effectiveness.

b. Plans for FY08

- i. Annual Periodic Refresher Training: The AF SAPR, in conjunction with AFPC Operations, is developing a standardized presentation that field-level SARCs will use to conduct annual periodic refresher training for all AF members. Individual SARCs may supplement the standard format with local information or processes. An objective of the standard presentation is to provide an easier transition to the Automated Distributed Learning System, a computer-based web training tool employed by the AF for many recurring training requirements, so that members will have access world-wide and maximize individual schedules in accomplishing the training. Installation SARCs will also continue to offer training as requested by Commanders or other leaders, organizations, or AF functions.

- ii. Bystander Intervention: The development of the new bystander intervention training modules are due for delivery from contracted services in June 2008; the proposed plan is to launch force-wide training in the men, women, and leader categories by September 2008.
- iii. Chaplain Training: The AF Chaplain Service is scheduled to begin refresher SAPR training to all worldwide locations in May 2008 with a programmed completion by September 2008.
- iv. Inspector General: Following the anticipated publication of the AF Policy Directive by January 2008, the Inspector General inspection services has developed a plan to inspect functional-specific training for SARCs and VAs during Unit Compliance Inspections.
- v. AFOSI: Throughout 2008, the AFOSI will launch periodic sexual assault response training through the Learning Management System, a computer based training system that enables immediate access for investigators world-wide to remain current in training. As well, the investigative service will be offering Defense Clearance and Investigations Index (DCII) and National Crime Information Center (NCIC) checks on VA candidates.
- vi. The Judge Advocate General's Corps (JA): The training plan for FY08 calls for continuing to strengthen formal training at TJAGS, as well as increasing opportunities for training outside the school.
  - 1. The TJAGS faculty continues to seek incorporation of training on aspects of sexual assault cases within all appropriate current and planned courses.
  - 2. Integration of experienced litigators to the faculty as instructor/litigators has been accomplished. As instructor/litigators they continue to be a trial resource for installation commanders while bringing real –world, current expertise to advocacy training for judge advocates.
  - 3. The Trial Advocacy Conference (TAC) format will replace the overseas regional circuit conferences. The Conference provides practicing trial and defense counsel updates on evolving aspects of military trial practice, practical lessons on securing and using evidence and experts, and court room skills practice with immediate feedback.

4. The School is pursuing long distance learning opportunities, as well as providing just-in-time training on a number of topics relevant to the management and trial of sexual assault cases. The first topic, Trying Sexual Assault Cases, will be presented via webcast in early FY08. The speaker will be Ms Teresa Scalzo, Senior Policy Advisor to the DoD Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Office. This experienced litigator will share her insights in trying sexual assault cases, particularly cases involving alcohol. The webcast will be recorded and made available for web access by other Air Force judge advocates. Additional webcasts are planned covering DoDI-specified training topics.

5. Joint training scenarios with other functionals are being sought. TJAGS attended a meeting with Air Force Office of Special Investigations, AF Sexual Assault Response Program, SARC and outside experts exploring training synergies.

c. US CENTCOM AOR Issues

i. AFOSI: The AFOSI will continue to track and ensure that evidence lockers are available to deployed operating locations for greatest protection of evidential material in sexual assault cases. The investigative service has also initiated procedures to ensure sufficient availability of kits in the deployed environment and keep sexual assault forensic examination kits on hand as a backup for the medical services at deployed sites.

ii. Medical Services: AF Expeditionary Medical Support facilities in the deployed environment have at least one family physician assigned, who received sexual assault forensic examination during residency, to perform sexual assault forensic examinations; each of the deployed facilities also maintains a minimum supply of two forensic examination kits as standard deployment material.

iii. CENTAF: The AF Wing Commander at Al Udeid Air Base, Qatar, has identified the SARC position as a key authorization and has requested changing the tour length from current 120-day to a 365-day tour. This request was based on a large population that experiences high turnover rates in personnel and stresses associated with a high operations tempo and added complexities of a transient population. The purpose of the planned extended tour is to provide greater continuity of service to victims and command structures.
